

I saw this osprey in Banff, Canada. It was nesting just across the highway from our lodge. As I watched in complete and utter awe, I slowly became aware of how oblivious people were to the beautiful creature in their midst. In this painting, "Waiting," I wanted to capture the osprey's power and captivating beauty. As it sat anticipating the return of its partner, I too contemplated the wait until it would be such a time like this in Great Britain where the Osprey would be great in number and have the freedom of the skies.

LORNA HAMILTON

Resides: North Ireland
b. 1973, North Ireland

Waiting
Osprey
Oil on linen, 22 x 26