The people who live in the Arctic today call themselves Inuit—which means “human beings.” Years ago to survive they had to hunt all the time, in good and bad weather, over vast distances. They created rock formations called inuksuk (means more than one), which helped to guide travellers/hunters, and acted as storage places for food, helping with the caribou hunt. The word Inuksuk means “thing that can act in the place of a human being.”
